When the three began collaborating a little over a decade ago, none could have anticipated that they would become a force of nature but they are intent on proving otherwise. Comprised of vocalist Damian Pipes, guitarist Jim Kraneveldt, and Graham White on the keyboards, Yesterdays Fate is a CAN/UK Rock Band whose captivating music contains hints of pop and country. Located in Northern Ireland, UK and Canada yet united by their mutual passion for creating supercharged authentic songs, they are each equal contributors when it comes to songwriting, a fact which makes their artistry all the more innovative and dynamic.

Having previously released songs including Hope (currently a semi finalist in the UK Songwriting Competition) Circles and a tribute to all front line workers Stay At Home (also a semi finalist in the UK Songwriting Competition), Yesterdays Fate's latest single Caught in the Headlights is doing really well receiving radio play in many countries.

Yesterdays Fate takes listeners to a distant place within the realms of melodic pop/rock with their eclectic catalogue of melody driven songs. A prime fusion of emotive vocals, piano virtuosity, and insane guitar licks where each member gets a platform to showcase their talent and shine in the limelight, the result is a melting pot of success which is the band's distinguishing feature as they hit fans one hook at a time. Their explosive and highly entertaining tunes are most vivid, pulsating with a vibrancy that is as uncontainable as it is memorable. It is in their individual uniqueness that their collective power and star quality is found, a great contrast to their name as their musical journey continually unfolds to their destined global reach.

“ While an uptempo and melodically driven track, it is edgier than their previous releases. Keeping their roots firmly in melodic pop-rock, they are showing off their versatility with a lean to the dark side. ”
